

SUNDAY SPORT- IN HISTORY

How we marked the BIGGEST news events in history. Today, the death of Stalin . . .

Thought: If it's Red, nuke it

Sunday Sport 1d

Sunday October 17, 1953
No1,876 ONE PENNY
Registered at G.P.O. as a Newspaper

++ SPECIAL NEWS INVESTIGATION ++

IS YOUR MOTHER -IN-LAW A SECRET COMMIE?

Thirteen-year-old paints bedroom black and won't come out

A THIRTEEN-year-old has painted his bedroom black and won't come out. The youngster, from Goole, entered his room shortly after celebrating his birthday following an argument with his mother over a blocked outside toilet. His final words to her were believed to be "whatever". The last young person to do this, Stanley Green from Rochdale, Lancs, didn't emerge from his room until his twentieth birthday. Parents are advised to birch any young person who behaves in this manner.

INVENTOR OF THE MINTBALL DIES

MILLIONS PERISH IN HIS QUEST FOR THE PERFECT SWEET
HE HAD REALLY FRESH BREATH, TRUMAN
MINT KING WAS PLANNING PURGE ON CHOCOLATE MAKERS

FACE OF HITLER FOUND IN LONDON PEA SOUPER

PANIC gripped the streets of London last night when the face of late Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler appeared in a pea-souper fog. Shoppers and office workers struggling through the murk screamed in horror as the apparition appeared above the Victoria Embankment. Clerk Hubert Green shuddered: "We thought we'd seen the last of that one-balled Jew-baiter when he killed himself in Berlin eight years ago. "But there he was, large as life in the middle of the fog leering down on the people of London who he tried to break with his accursed Luftwaffe. "What we need is some clean air legislation to clear the fog so that Hitler cannot appear in it again." Prime Minister Winston Churchill said: "Hitler? In the very clouds? Bah!"

UNCLE Joseph Stalin, the world-famous founder of the Uncle Joe's Mint Ball, has died peacefully in his sleep aged 73.

As he passed away sucking a Mint Ball, he was joined by his closest associates. These included Georgi Malenkov, who now takes control of the Mint Ball's means of production, Nikita Khrushchev, who will oversee the running of the peppermint, sugar and toffee collective farms, and Nikolai Bulganin, composer of the world-famous Mint Ball Song which goes: "Now there's a place in Siberia, a place you all should know. A busy little gulag, where things are all the go. They don't make Jakes or Eccles Cakes or things to stick on walls. By night and day they work away at Uncle Joe's Mint Balls. The body of Stalin, whose motto "Workers Unite, You Have Nothing To Lose But Your Mints" sparked a revolution in worldwide confectionary production, will be preserved in Lenin's Mint Mausoleum. Over 20 million Soviet citizens perished in Stalin's quest for Mint Ball domination, including his one-time close compatriot Leon Trotsky — the only man apart from Stalin to know the recipe which was mixed in secret by gulag prisoners who were later executed. In 1941, sweet-toothed German leader Adolf Hitler invaded the Soviet Union in a bid to steal the secret formula he called "my precious". Khrushchev yesterday announced that the means of production would now be extended to new territories in East Germany under the supervision of chief line-manager Erich Honecker and will include not only Mint Balls but also Pear Drops, Aniseed Balls, Treacle Toffee and Black Jacks. But, in a speech at Fulton, USA, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill warned that the world was entering a new and dangerous sweet race. He added: "A shadow has fallen on eastern Europe which is now cut off from the free world by a toffee curtain. "Behind that line people of eastern Europe are subject to Soviet influence, totalitarian control and minty sweets." American President Harry Truman said Western scientists were working on producing a new fizz bomb, "more powerful than a hundred Mint Balls put together". He added: "Stalin may have had fresh minty breath, but at what cost to democracy?"

H-bomb makes commies talk like Donald Duck

THE Americans have developed a new kind of bomb which will make Commies speak like Walt Disney favourite, Donald Duck. President Truman announced on Tuesday. The device, tested in the Pacific last week, uses the power of the A-bomb to create a fusion reaction turning atoms of hydrogen into that of helium. And, as any schoolboy knows, inhaling helium makes you talk like Donald Duck! An elated Truman told newsmen: "We, at last, have a weapon which will reduce the massed ranks of the Red Army into an international laughing stock. "They will march forward lustily singing their anthem, Gimn Sovetskogo Soyuza, and we'll drop the H-bomb on them.

"Then, instead of hearing a hymn to the progress of international Bolshevism, all onlookers will hear is "Quack, quack, quackccccccg. "How we will laugh." Questioned further, President Truman conceded that a side affect of the H-bomb was destruction on an unprecedented scale and searing temperatures exceeding that of the surface of the sun.

Drunken Margaret crowned Queen as prank

THE Princess Margaret was crowned Queen last night after playing a drunken prank on the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Princess had been partying with friends in Soho until around two in the morning when she ordered her police driver to take her to Lambeth Palace. There, according to sources, she convinced the bleary-eyed cleric that elder sister Elizabeth "didn't fancy the idea of being Queen any more". A Lambeth Palace source said that the Princess presented the Archbishop with a signed request from Princess Elizabeth that Margaret be crowned Queen instead. Investigators later found that the request was written in lipstick on a nightclub napkin. Last night the Lord High Lord Chamberlain fumed: "This is a total fabout and who is the poor c who's got to sort it out? "You guessed it, me!"

I FOUND DEAD RED UNDER MY BED
Full story page 7

DUTCH EVEREST LEADER QUILTS WITH VERTIGO
See page 29